Basis and Purpose:

These regulations amend Chapter W-1 - Fishing - of the Parks and Wildlife Commission Regulations. These regulations are designed to manage statewide aquatic resources and provide a diversity of angling recreation opportunities for resident and nonresident anglers throughout Colorado. They are the result of extensive public involvement and application of biological information on aquatic species. All regulation changes are based on the best available biological information and are designed to manage aquatic resources towards stated objectives. In addition to annual changes and non-substantive clean-up, these regulations specifically address the following:

Walleye Spawning Closures at Chatfield, Cherry Creek, and Pueblo Reservoirs

The previous fishing regulations regarding the walleye spawn closures at Chatfield and Cherry Creek Reservoirs stated that "Fishing is prohibited from the dam and within 100 feet of the dam or walleye spawning nets from March 15-April 15, or until walleye spawning operations are complete." However, due to warmer spring weather patterns experienced in recent years, it has been necessary for CPW staff to start spawning operations prior to March 15 due to earlier fish spawning activity compared to previous years. Moving the start date of the closure to March 1st instead, will protect the walleye spawning nets if it is deemed necessary to begin spawning operations prior to March 15.

A very similar regulation also existed at Pueblo Reservoir, except the Pueblo regulation also included a time of day stipulation for the closure of from 4:00 PM to 9:00 AM. In addition to modifying the starting date of the closure for Pueblo to March 1st to remain consistent with the closure dates at Chatfield and Cherry Creek, the regulation for Pueblo was further modified to remove the time of day stipulation. Expanding the fishing closure to 24 hours will give spawning crews more leeway on the timing of retrieving and setting the gill nets and it will reduce the number of lures in the nets, which is a safety hazard for staff and volunteers pulling nets and picking fish. Boaters also have entangled their propellers in the nets which poses a significant risk of sinking during windy days and unnecessary damage to gillnets.

Special Regulations for Dry Gulch

The greenback cutthroat trout, Colorado's state recognized fish, is listed as a Threatened species under the Endangered Species Act, with management of this sub-species guided by the Greenback Recovery Team (GBRT). The Bear Creek greenback cutthroat trout (referred to hereafter as greenback) was recently discovered (and recognized by the GBRT) as the only lineage of cutthroat trout native to the South Platte Basin. At the time of discovery, the native greenbacks remained extant in only one stream (Bear Creek). Fortunately, in the past five years CPW and GBRT partners have worked intensively to expand the distribution of these fish to other waters. Dry Gulch is one such location that supports one of only three populations of the greenback within the South Platte Basin.

While harvest of trout from Dry Gulch is now restricted, CPW believes this water should remain open to angling in order to increase awareness regarding the recovery of this species. Allowing anglers to catch and safely handle the native cutthroat in a tangible fashion, is an effective way to build an alliance of support amongst the angling community for greenback recovery efforts.

New Crappie Regulations at Pueblo Reservoir

Previously, many anglers at Pueblo Reservoir were regularly harvesting their full bag limit of crappie (20 fish) as the fish populations have rebounded in recent years during high water. It was also noted that these anglers were harvesting crappie starting at 4-6 inches long, even though they provide very little meat for consumption. The main issue with harvesting crappie less than 10 inches long is that they do not reach maturation until 2-4 years of age. Aquatic biologists have analyzed data from crappie populations in Colorado's northeastern plains reservoirs. They have found that crappie do not reach age 2 until they are 5.6 inches long on average, and do not reach age 4 until they are 9.3 inches long on average. Therefore, crappie that are being harvested at 5 inches long never get a chance to spawn.

The matter is further exacerbated by water-level fluctuations. Pueblo Reservoir, as with most waters in Colorado, is drawn down, sometimes to extreme levels, for irrigation and other purposes. Water levels have the potential to be drawn down too far and too quickly during the crappie spawn, eliminating habitat and/or drying out spawned eggs. When this happens, the reservoir would be missing a year class of crappie if it were not for hatchery stockings. By protecting these fish up to 10 inches long, the few females who do mature before reaching this size have the potential to reproduce at least once before they are 10 inches and are subject to harvest.

Another issue Pueblo Reservoir faces is the heavy angling pressure and increasing popularity of the fishery through promotion on social media and fishing forums. Crappies are a fish species that have the potential to congregate in large numbers in one location. Therefore, once anglers locate a school of crappie, it is very easy for these anglers to catch their limit of crappie (or more) in a short amount of time. By dropping the bag and possession limits to 10 instead of 20, we can help reduce the amount of fish anglers harvest and hopefully maintain higher numbers in the population for reproduction.

New Wiper Regulations at Pueblo Reservoir

Currently, Colorado relies on out-of-state trades with Texas and Oklahoma to obtain wiper fry for stocking into Colorado reservoirs. These states have warmer climates than Colorado, so their white bass and striped bass (the parents of the wiper hybrid) spawn in late April or early May, while our striped bass and white bass do not typically spawn until June. In previous years, we have received our wiper fry for stocking in April or May during snowstorms or other inclement weather, or while our water temps are significantly lower than 63°F. This has resulted in poor stocking success due to "shock" from the extreme temperature swings and weather. The lack of stocking success has resulted in missing year classes in the populations of wipers in various Colorado reservoirs.

The aquatic biologist has been working hard on rebuilding the wiper population in Pueblo Reservoir to acceptable levels with many young (10-13") fish found in the 2017 fall sampling. The population is looking very good and anglers have reported catching many quality wipers in the past two years.

Anglers have expressed interest in CPW reducing the bag limit on wiper in Pueblo Reservoir for the past several years. During a "wiper summit" anglers particularly expressed interest in seeing a reduced bag limit at Pueblo Reservoir more in line with other drainages in the state where the limit is 10 fish. In addition, anglers have expressed a desire to see a protection of quality wipers found in Pueblo Reservoir by only allowing harvest of 1 fish \geq 21" in length. Anglers from the public wanted the regulation at 20", but in an effort to reduce confusion, we have suggested 21" to keep it the same as walleye.

Extension of Special Regulations on the Rio Grande River

The upper Rio Grande River has been managed as a quality fishery for several decades, including a section that is designated as Gold Medal Waters. The upper Rio Grande has increasingly become a destination of choice for the quality rainbow and brown trout fishing it has to offer. However, there was a section of river from the west fence of Masonic Park downstream to the Highway 149 bridge that previously had no special regulations. Public access is limited primarily to floating this section, since most of this stretch is privately held land. In order to provide more consistency throughout the reaches of the Rio Grande, while taking into account how this resource is currently utilized by the fishing public, the existing flies and lures only regulation as well as the catch and release provision for rainbow trout have been extended to this stretch of the river as well. Additionally, the bag and possession limits with maximum size for brown trout have also been extended for consistency and protection of the resource.

Special Regulations for Upper Seepage Lake

Upper Seepage Lake is a privately-owned irrigation reservoir known for its ability to grow large trout. For the past 25 years, this fishery has been unavailable due to an inconsistent water supply. However, CPW has recently entered into an agreement with the landowner to keep water in Upper Seepage Lake to maintain it as a viable trophy trout fishery.

The last .5 miles of access road to Upper Seepage Lake is passable only in a high clearance 4WD vehicle or OHV. Therefore, regular stocking by a hatchery truck is not possible. This regulatory change will protect the limited amount of stocked trout available for Upper Seepage Lake.

Nearby, there are several area lakes open to bait use all year long including Road Canyon Reservoir, Regan Lake, Continental Reservoir, and Rito Hondo Reservoir. Therefore, Upper Seepage Lake will provide a new and unique angling opportunity for anglers in the area.

Catch and Release Regulations for Bass and Channel Catfish at Valco Pond #7

The Valco Ponds are a series of gravel pits that have been filled with water and are now owned by CPW and managed by Lake Pueblo State Park. Some of the ponds have been leased and stocked by CPW with fish dating back to 1996. Currently, ponds #5-7 are not open to the public for fishing, and pond #4 is only partially open to fishing. With the recent passing of the landowner, CPW has gained full ownership of all seven of the Valco ponds. CPW intends to open pond #4 to the public by the end of 2018, with the intention of opening the last three ponds within a year.

The Valco Ponds receive moderate fishing pressure, which varies by pond. In the absence of public access, Pond #7 has grown some very large catfish and largemouth bass and the resource is capable of producing some trophy sized fish. Since ponds #5-7 have not been stocked since 2011 and are not open to the public for fishing, they have benefited from little to no harvest, but have relied solely on natural reproduction to sustain the fishery. Therefore, there are very few small fish in the system; the fishery is comprised of mostly large, older fish.

A restrictive harvest regulation on Valco pond #7 will provide for a trophy angling opportunity and allow biologists to reestablish younger year classes of sportfish while rebuilding an adequate forage base. CPW aquatic biologists would like to continue to allow harvest (statewide bag and possession) on ponds #1-6 and develop pond #7 into a destination, trophy bass and channel catfish water.

The statutory authority for these regulations can be found in § 24-4-103, C.R.S., and the state Wildlife Act, §§ 33-1-101 to 33-6-209, C.R.S., specifically including, but not limited to: §§ 33-1-106.

EFFECTIVE DATE - THESE REGULATIONS SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1, 2019 AND SHALL REMAIN IN FULL FORCE AND EFFECT UNTIL REPEALED, AMENDED OR SUPERSEDED.
