

Andrew Todd, Running Rivers, Founder and President

Dr. Andrew Todd has spent his career working to ensure the health of rivers and streams in Colorado. Andrew has worked as a contaminants biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, as an aquatics specialist for Trout Unlimited's Western Water Project, as a research biologist for the U.S. Geological Survey, and currently as an aquatic ecotoxicologist for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Andrew served for 9 years as a Commissioner on the governor-appointed Colorado Water Quality Control Commission, two years of which he served as Chair. Andrew also recently served on the Board of Trustees of the Colorado Foundation for Water Education. Andrew is a stubborn trail runner, a barely-above-average fly fisherman, and a craft beer enthusiast, three passions that he fused together to create his dream race, the Rocky Mountain Flyathlon!
