

Bill Alspach, Trails Preservation Alliance

Bill Alspach is an adventurer, author and outdoor recreation consultant. He is a licensed professional engineer with technical specialties in Water Resources, Erosion & Sediment Control and Municipal Engineering. Growing up in Boulder, Colorado Bill learned early in life to appreciate outdoor recreation and has spent a lifetime recreating outdoors, bicycling and riding off-road motorcycles. He has written feature articles for Overland Journal, Dirt Rider and Big Tank (a Japanese periodical for long distance motorcycle riders) magazines. Bill's adventures have included multi-day long distance bicycle trips, competitive cycling, off-road motorcycles expeditions, guiding motorcyclists, along with international rides and rally competitions in Japan. He has served the past six years as a volunteer on the Colorado Parks and Wildlife's Off-Highway Vehicle Subcommittee and currently provides technical consulting services to the Trails Preservation Alliance.
