

Chandi Aldena

Chandi Aldena has been with The Trust for Public Land since 2014. As the Colorado Parks for People Project Coordinator she is responsible for community engagement and outreach, planning and design support, and project coordination. The program currently includes park renovation and new park construction projects across the Denver Metro Area and Colorado Springs. Her work in the Denver metro area ranges from the GOCO Inspire Initiative in the Westwood and Cole neighborhoods, to the Meet Me in the Park Program at Mestizo-Curtis Park a park activation project with community partners, and a National Endowment for the Arts park project with a local artist in northwest Aurora. She is passionate about making the community engagement process equitable for all community members; she loves engaging residents of all ages in park design especially engaging youth in hands-on workshops to design nature play. Chandi enjoys the opportunity to work collaboratively with partners in Colorado and across the country to further The Trust for Public Land's Parks for People mission, that everyone in the U.S. lives within a 10-minute walk of a quality park.
