

Dr. Michael R. Quartuch

Dr. Michael R. Quartuch is the Human Dimensions Specialist with Colorado Parks and Wildlife (CPW). As a social scientist and researcher with CPW, Mike collaborates with biologists, researchers, and other CPW staff to broadly understand human-wildlife interactions and to explore ways to promote wildlife conservation and sustainable park management. Prior to joining CPW, Mike received his Ph.D. from the University of Maine's School of Forest Resources and worked as a Postdoctoral Research Associate in the Human Dimensions Research Unit (HDRU) at Cornell University. Mike's specializations broadly include: Natural resource management; human dimensions of wildlife; qualitative and quantitative research methods; place and community attachment; and environmental attitudes, norms, and behaviors.
