Welcome!

Green mountain meadows, lush aspen groves and pine-covered hills greet you at Golden Gate Canyon State Park, 16 miles northwest of Golden.

With more than 12,000 acres of beauty ranging in elevation from 7,600 to 10,400 feet, Golden Gate offers a variety of outdoor recreation opportunities within a one hour drive of the Denver area.

Visitors Center

The Visitors Center, which is open year-round, is located just inside the southeast entrance of the park on Golden Gate Canyon Road. Featured at the Visitors Center is the Wilbur and Nellie Larkin Memorial Nature Trail. This trail was designed to be accessible to the physically challenged and winds around the park's trout show pond. Inside the center are displays and exhibits describing the wildlife and plants of the area; a topographical scale model of the park; and a sales outlet for books, maps, shirts and other interesting items.

Activities

Rock Climbing

Multiple climbing opportunities can be found throughout the park and, in most cases, requires hiking into the backcountry. The Park does not maintain climbing areas for rock fall, nor routes for fixed hardware, and makes no representation or warranties regarding the safety, reliability or suitability for use of any fixed anchors or other hardware currently existing or installed in the future. It is unlawful to place fixed or permanent climbing hardware without a permit obtained from the Park Manager.

Fishing and Hunting

Fishing is permitted in any stream or pond in the park except the Visitors Center show pond. All ponds are stocked regularly during the summer. A Colorado fishing license (available at the Visitors Center and online) is required.

Hunting in the park is controlled and is permitted in the Jefferson County portion of the park only. No hunting is allowed from sunset the Friday prior to Memorial Day until sunrise the Tuesday following Labor Day.

Hunting reservations are required through:
cpw.state.co.us/huntingreservations

Limited access permits are available for hunting elk on the Green Ranch portion of the park. Information on seasons, regulations, and Green Ranch permits are available at the park office or on the web site.
