Basis and Purpose:

These regulations amend Chapter W-1 - Fishing - of the Parks and Wildlife Commission Regulations. These regulations are designed to manage statewide aquatic resources and provide a diversity of angling recreation opportunities for resident and nonresident anglers throughout Colorado. They are the result of public involvement and the application of biological information on aquatic species. All regulation changes are based on the best available biological information and are designed to manage aquatic resources towards stated objectives.

Remove Bonny Reservoir from water specific regulations

Bonny Reservoir was a reservoir located north of Burlington on the Eastern Plains of Colorado. Water specific regulations were created to facilitate an emergency salvage of fish when Bonny Reservoir was being permanently drained starting in 2011. Bonny Reservoir has been completely empty since 2012 and will be empty for the foreseeable future. Since the reservoir is empty, there is no need for any special regulation to be in place on Bonny Reservoir.

Amend regulations on current and planned native greenback cutthroat trout conservation waters

Slater Lake, Lost Lake and Boston Peak Creek currently contain native greenback cutthroat trout or are planned to be stocked by 2025. Greenback cutthroat trout are a state-threatened Tier 1 State Wildlife Action Plan (SWAP) species. They are also a federally threatened species, so take or harvest is prohibited. Amending water specific regulations on these waters to include flies and lures only and all trout must be returned to the water immediately upon catch will expedite the establishment of these populations.

Adopt a minimum size limit for white bass at Boyd Lake

Due to a relatively robust snowpack and exceptional natural recruitment of white bass, angling success for this species has been good for the past 4-5 years. However, the population is trending downward based on the 2023 gillnet survey and there has been a boom and bust cycle whereby the population substantially declines every 5 years. To maintain quality angling and bolster natural reproduction a 10-inch minimum size limit for white bass at Boyd Lake will be adopted to protect white bass from harvest until they reach spawning size.

Amend regulations on waters stocked with native Rio Grande cutthroat trout

The Sand Creek drainage, Rito Hondo Reservoir and Rito Hondo Creek above the reservoir has been reclaimed or are being reclaimed from non-native trout and stocked with native Rio Grande cutthroat trout. Implementing a catch-and-release and fly-and-lure-only regulation will decrease the time needed to establish self-sustaining populations. Rio Grande cutthroat trout are a state-threatened Tier 1 State Wildlife Action Plan (SWAP) species. Amending water specific regulations on these waters to include flies and lures only and all trout must be returned to the water immediately upon catch will expedite the establishment of these populations.

Modify fishing closure on East River

The East River is located north of the town of Gunnison. Migrating kokanee salmon stage in the East River below the Roaring Judy State Fish Hatchery outlet before migrating into the hatchery.

Angler catch and release of kokanee disrupts the migration and leads to additional kokanee mortality and reduced egg quality. A fishing closure of August 1 through October 31 was implemented in 2001 on the East River downstream of the hatchery outlet to the southern hatchery property boundary (.4 miles). As few kokanee migrate in early August, the closure will be modified to August 15 - October 31 to allow angling use in early August without impacting migrating kokanee and the collection of eggs.

Adopt a fishing closure on Fish Creek

Fish Creek is the primary spawning tributary of the Yampa River for mountain whitefish. Mountain whitefish are one of two native sportfish in northwest Colorado, the other being Colorado River Cutthroat Trout. Dramatic Declines in the native Mountain Whitefish population of the Upper Yampa River drainage have been evident over the past twenty-five years. This decline has been attributed to several factors, including: the development of reservoirs, the expansion of non-native northern pike within the Yampa River basin, and extreme drought. In collaboration with CPW, voluntary fall fishing closures have been implemented by the City of Steamboat Springs to provide protection for mountain whitefish, as they are highly vulnerable at this location during the spawning season. Lack of compliance with voluntary fishing closures combined with continued development along Fish Creek necessitates the adoption of an annual mandatory fall fishing closure.

Modify bag and possession limits for brown trout on the Fryingpan River

Over the last 10 years, the abundance of brown trout has been increasing in the Fryingpan River; however, the number of larger trout and average length of trout is decreasing. Decreasing size of fish is linked to an exceedingly dense population of brown trout, which creates competition for food resources. The dense population of brown trout and declining average fish length indicates the Fryingpan River is overpopulated. Current CPW research also demonstrates that brown trout density impact the success of wild rainbow trout recovery efforts through competition and predation in densely populated waters. Expanding the bag and possession limit for brown trout complements other management efforts to improve the growth and recruitment of trout throughout the lower Fryingpan River.

Remove Horseshoe Reservoir from water specific regulations

Horseshoe Reservoir is located west of Boyd Lake State Park, northeast of Loveland. Surface water recreational rights belong to the homeowners surrounding Horseshoe Reservoir and public fishing is no longer allowed on any portion of this water or shoreline. Fish stocking by CPW ceased in 2019 and the reservoir is no longer managed by CPW. Water specific regulations for walleye and saugeye will be removed given no public access exists.

Modify bag, possession and size limits for walleye at Horsetooth Reservoir

Horsetooth Reservoir walleye population is sustained through natural reproduction. However, decreased recruitment was observed around 2017 due to competition between rainbow smelt and juvenile walleye along with predation from adult rainbow smelt on juvenile walleye. Loss of recruitment led CPW to begin stocking walleye fry in 2021 in an attempt to bolster recruitment. CPW also began stocking ten-inch rainbow trout to put additional predation pressure on rainbow smelt in an attempt to keep rainbow smelt numbers at a manageable level. Rainbow smelt numbers have decreased over the last five years, but walleye recruitment has remained limited. A more restrictive walleye regulation will reduce potential harvest and help protect brood walleye. The size restriction of 21 – 24 inches will protect female walleye for their first several years ensuring they have several years of spawning potential prior to being susceptible to angler harvest. Once they reach 21 inches they will be vulnerable to angler harvest, but adults greater than 24 inches, with high reproductive potential, will be protected from harvest. Reducing the bag and possession limit to two walleye will also decrease the number of walleye that can be harvested keeping more spawning/brood fish in the reservoir.

Remove Kerr Lake from water specific regulations

Kerr Lake is located in the mountains west of Alamosa and Monte Vista and is stocked biannually with recreational Rio Grande cutthroat trout. Recreational Rio Grande cutthroat trout are not 100% genetically pure and do not have any influence on the conservation efforts of genetically pure Rio Grande cutthroat trout. A fly and-lure regulation has been in place at Kerr Lake as far back as 1995 when the bag-and-possession limit was updated to 2 trout. Removing the water specific regulations at Kerr Lake will allow more fish to be harvested.

Modify water specific regulations at Lake Granby

In the past decades, Lake Granby supported a popular recreational kokanee fishery; however, the lake trout population and resulting predation pressure in more recent years have diminished the availability of kokanee to recreational anglers. The current bag and possession limits and the walleye snagging season on Lake Granby are no longer appropriate, and need to be modified to restore this essential component of the fishery. Increasing the bag and possession limits of lake trout while adopting a more conservative bag and possession limit for kokanee and removing the snagging season at Lake Granby will allow for more lake trout and less kokanee salmon harvest. These changes will also manage for trophy lake trout opportunities.

Remove Rocky Fork Creek from water specific regulations

Recent genetic data shows that the cutthroat trout present in Rocky Fork Creek are Yellowstone cutthroat trout, which are not native. Rocky Fork Creek is also very remote and receives low fishing pressure. The special fishing regulations (catch-and-release for cutthroat trout, flies and lures only) on Rocky Fork Creek are no longer necessary and will be removed.

Adopt a bag and possession limit for wiper at Union Reservoir

According to 2023 survey data, angler harvest for wiper at Union Reservoir has surpassed what can be allocated from our hatchery system. Wiper production generally relies on out of state fish trades with Oklahoma and Texas, thus availability of this species is limited. With a combination of evidence from the creel survey, annual gillnet data, and limited hatchery production the bag and possession limit for wiper at Union Reservoir will be reduced from 10 to 5 wiper.

Remove Walker Lake State Wildlife Area from water specific regulations

Walker State Wildlife Area (SWA) is a true SWA and once had a lake named Walker Lake. Walker Lake was an abandoned gravel pit lake on the north side of the Colorado River when the property was designated as a SWA. Multiple years of high water and flooding of the Colorado River in the area has completely inundated the gravel pit, and what was once a man-made lake is now a functioning backwater and floodplain of the river. As Walker Lake no longer exists, there is no longer a need for the regulation.

Adopt water specific regulations for Wolf Creek to protect Colorado River Cutthroat Trout

A rare San Juan lineage of Colorado River Cutthroat Trout were stocked into the South Fork of Wolf Creek after a non-native removal effort in 2018. In addition, a reclamation project was completed in 2021 to remove non-native trout from the headwaters of Wolf Creek above the confluence with the South Fork of Wolf Creek. This section was then restocked with native San Juan cutthroats in 2023. Both the South Fork and Headwater reaches terminate at a waterfall just downstream of Forest Road 725. Adopting water specific restrictions to Wolf Creek downstream to USFS 725 and updating the water specific restrictions to the South Fork of Wolf Creek will protect this unique cutthroat trout population and provide clarity.

Cleanup regulations for Blue River, Duck Creek, Hermosa Creek, and Los Pinos Creek

The changes for Blue River and Hermosa Creek are for clarification for anglers. The change to Duck creek is to correct a misspelling of Duck. And the last change for Los Pinos will modify the water specific regulation to match the wording for other similar waters standardizing the language and increasing consistency.

EFFECTIVE DATE - THESE REGULATIONS SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE APRIL 1, 2025, AND SHALL REMAIN IN FULL FORCE AND EFFECT UNTIL REPEALED, AMENDED, OR SUPERSEDED.
